tucky and Tennessee, can obtain them now by giving a notice where they received them and where the wish them forwarded for the time paid for The letter lately written by Horace Greeley to Garrett Davis betrays, on the part of the said Horace, the demerit of the Union in his estimation. He and his school couldn't get the offices. He reminds Davis that Aytle Buckner once dared to vote for a restriction on slavery, and was beaten. He tells Davis, too, that Powell and Magoffin were made Governors by the pro slavery men, over the friends of Garritt Davis. We happen to know better than all this in Kentucky; but the remarks of Greeley show what is the matter. He doesn't wish a restoration of the old Union; this Greeley has long since given notice of. Greeley has felt indignant that these Southern men and Democrats should hold fat offices, and he and his friends stand out in the cold.

What harm these men ever did Greeley he doesn't say; but he warns Davis that if these Southern fellows are not effectually is not only beyond cavil, but beyond cavcrushed out, they will turn up again and turn Davis & Co. out very likely, and that is not to be endured.

Julian, of Indiana, is indignant, too, when he thinks of the old Union. He and learn it. his school have been out of office, without spoils-couldn't get a spoil. He can't abide the thought of such times coming back. He doesn't allege that the men in office did him any harm. The great evil is, that they had been of the ins for a long time and he of the outs. The right to office is the right after all, and the danger of losing it, the greatest of perils.

It's a great pity these Southern fools and knaves started so soon. In a few years more Greeley, Julian & Co. would have got up a rebellion for the sake of freedom, humanity and other good things: really for the sake of office, nothing else. They would have precipitated simpletons enough to join them. Then the South would have been very loyal and for coercion. We should have whipped back a few States. The truth is, the North first started the idea of rebellion and secession in this country, and ought to have taken the responsibility of first carrying it out. The South only needed to wait a few years more, and they could have enjoyed whipping a Northern rebellion out. The tables are turned by their own folly, and they will be whipped out them-

The Sanitary Commission for the department of Kentucky respectfully and gratefully acknowledge the beneficent contributions of the citizans of Louisville, of various portions of Kentucky, and of several parts of Indiana, for the care, comfort, and restoration of the wounded at Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee. By the prompt munificence that responded to the appeal of the Sanitary Commission we were enabled to send the steamer E. H. Fairchild off on Thursday night on her mission of mercy and love, richly freighted with an abundance of the articles most needed by the suffering martyrs for their country's salvation. In representing Kentucky in The correspondent of the Chicago Evening Journal, writing from Island No. 10, under date of the 5th inst. (the day before the Island surrenderei), says:

We had not only to represent the common sympathy of an enlightened humanity, but to sustain the reputation of Kentucky for a large-hearted hospitality. And nobly has Kentucky responded to our desires and fally has she enabled us to discharge the duties of the sacred responsibility entrusted to us by the National Sanitary Commission. We cannot take the island so. We must pitch in and fight. Here we have laid for weeks and done noth-All the time they are fortifying and reinforcing, and getting strengthened in the idea that we cannot take the place."

It can do no harm now to mention a re mark Commodore Foote made to me in the early part of this siege. Said he: "We have done just enough to learn the position of the enemy. Now we are a going to wait and think. Victories are not won by fighting only. We want men, we want brave men, true men, whom we can rely en; but those men must in turn believe in you and in all your plans and orders, or you cannot hold their confidence and depend on their doing what is planned for them. We have difficult task here, even more difficult than was at first supposed. The rebels are strongly posted. We cannot operate to the best advantage on any one battery without being liable to a cross fire from others. We might pitch in and make a desperate attack and win, but we don't know how that would turn out. We should lose many men, at any rate, and, perhaps, some of our gunboats. I've got some of the best men in the world here under me. They believe in me, and I can trust them till the last breath. Now, I must not throw away their lives. They are too precious-precious to me, precious to their friends and the country. We've got to be patient awhile and wait and think We've but just got here, and I can't tell now by what means Island No. 10 will be ours Time and good thinking will work it out. We can't afford to lose a battle here. Look behind us and see all that lies at stake-up the rivers." The subject was continued further with allusion to certain measures which might be adopted. Well, we have waited, and the result ha ustified the wisdom, sagacity, prudence and umanity of Commodore Foote's suggestions. The island, six thousand prisoners, an immense lot of stores, guns, artillery, and amnunition, is in our hands without the loss of munition, is in our hands without the loss of a man. He had brave and rehable men with him, who, as he said, "believe in me and I can trust them till the last breath. Now. I I can trust them till the last breath. Now, I precious - precious to me, precious to their friends and the country "

This was the language of the noble soul. Richmond' editors who sit in their offices and write such valorous paragraphs about hurling men upon the foe's intrenchments," 'charging on the enemy's batteries," etc., counting the lives of our brave soldiers as nothing, so that they may round a paragraph upon national glory.

Interesting from Cumberland Gap and East Tennessee.

A young gentleman from Pittsburg, Pa. who was in the 2d Pennsylvania, under Gen. Patterson, in the three months' service, and was taken prisoner while scouting in the neighborhood of Harper's Ferry, a few days after Bull Run, called upon us yesterday. He was sent to Richmond where, representing himself as a Mary. lander, he was released after a month's im prisonment. Finding it impossible to cross the rebel lines, to save himself from starvation he commenced work on the rebei fortifications about Richmond, and subsequently became a member of Latrobe's battery. He remained with the battery, in Virginia, till after the battle of Mill Springs, when the battery was ordered to East Tennessee, to supply the loss of artillery in that engagement.

He says that large bodies of the best troops in Virginia were sent West, but most in the direction of Decatur and Corinth. and up to the time he left the Gap, a few days ago, they were still moving over the Great Central road.

The forces at the Gap, at the time he left, consisted of the Third Georgia Battalion, Eleventh Tennessee, Twenty-ninth North Carolina and Kamp's East Tennessee Battalion, composed of men pressed into the service, and all under command of Colonel Rains They had seventeen pieces of artili lery commanding the entrance to the Gap, consisting of two 64-pounders, and 32's, 12's and 6-pounder guns, all smooth-bore save one. They had sent for reinforcements and long range guns, as they had been con-vinced that they could do nothing against our Parrotts, which, in the recent reconnoissance, had shelled them with ease and

There were besides these, the 20th and 23d Alabama, numbering, however, but 1,000 effective fighting men; the 3d Tennessee, which distinguished itself at Manassas; the 39th North Carolina, and a section of La-trobe's battery, called the 3d Maryland Battery, at Kingston, the junction of the Clinch and Holstein rivers, where they were expecting an attack. Gen. Crittennen was expected at Knoxville, though it was the mpression of our informant that he would not go there, and that he proceeded from Decatur to Florence, to reinforce Beauregard. What remained of Floyd's brigade was at Chattanooga.

Before he left, the 2d Mississippi and 5th Georgia, refusing to re-enlist, had their arms taken from them. They applied for transportation home, and that was refused, whereupon they marched off in a body, dis-gusted with the service. The Alabams troops died off at a fearful rate. They seemed incapable of endurance, and were no sooner exposed to fatigue than they commenced sickening and dying at a fearful rate.

He represents the Union men of East Ten. nessee as bitter beyond conception. No soldier dare go out from his camp alone. Our informant says he was in mortal fear of them till he came within our lines. The Union men there carry on a relentless warfare among the mountains. The force at Cumberland Gap extend their pickets in both directions; on this side to prevent a Federal advance; on the other, towards Knoxville, to prevent the escape of hundreds who have been impressed into the service. There was one company at the Gap whose members, ence and their supplies of horses, mules &c .. must not throw away their lives. They are too from the Union men, and the most atrocious outrages were committed in the name, i not by the authority, of Jeff. Davis. Maj. Gen. Kirby Smith is in command of all the forces in East Tennessee.

had heard from official sources, it is his impression that the rebels intend making East Tennessee their point d'appui if driven from Virginia. He should not be surprised to hear at any time that Jeff Davis and his Government would be in Knoxville. It will not, certainly, be given up without hard

He says that every means will be resorted to to conceal from the troops the reverses they have recently sustained. They claimed a victory at Pea Ridge, had not heard of the retreat from Manassas and the aban-donment of Pensacola, and understood that there was nothing lost at Columbus in the way of material. General Johnston, now dead, had lost standing among them, but they looked upon Beauregard as a second Napoleon. He thinks they will claim a de-cided victory at Pittsburg Landing, and says the result will be inconsequential to us, unless we are able to push up the advantages gained and seize Corinth, in which case their cause would indeed be desperate.

They seem indifferent to everything but eat-ing, lounging and sleeping. Speaking of "contrabands"—out of the large number assembled at this point and Hampton creek, if you want a little labor work done, it is almost an impossibility to get any of these folks to do it. The creeks around and about here are filled with oysters-known to the lovers of bivalves as "Norfolk oysters," and the Roads and rivers swarm with fish—yet you cannot get either without great difficulty. When these colored people had masters, oysters were in abundance. It is only when want compels them that they will go out and catch a few Our soldiers wade in and catch them with their hands. ROCK-BOUND CREEK, April 6 - Special to Missouri Democrat.-The advance guard of our army, under General Osterhaus, encamped at this point last evening, having marched twenty miles from their old camp at Cross Timbers. The people in this vi-cinity are mostly Union, there being but three Secessionists on this road from Cassville to Flat Creek. I stopped with a good Union man last night, and found several of his neighbors present, all anxious to be in-formed whether our army was going to leave them to the tender mercies of the Secession ists. They sai I no money could hire them to endure the constant annoyance submit ted to last summer. They were obliged to leave their families and crops suffering, and helter themselves for days and weeks in the oush, to get out of reach of the rebels. Bands of outlaws frequently came down from Cassville, and would rob the Union inhabitants of everything in their housesblankets, bread, bacon, &c., and if they caught the owner he would be taken under trong guard to Cassville. In consequence of the uncertainties he future and quiet state of the country but a few are making any preparations to put in crops. Farms are laid waste, and fences are burned up along the main road, and Union men are discouraged. The se cessionists have mostly gone South with their negroes. Some Union people have not only abandoned the idea of making crops but are getting their negroes out, intending to foreake all and emigrate to a place of safety.

The wounded are doing well at Cassville. The court house and all prominent stores are being used as hospitals, it being a fortunate circumstance for them that the owners of the principal buildings had tampeded from the town. On the 13th an expedition consisting of cavalry and two mountain howitzers, recon noitered the country about Huntsville. At tions, reported a resolution that F. F. Lane

Tribune's Dispatch.—Our special correspondent with McDowell's command reports all quiet on Cedar run, 15 miles beyond Manassas. The railroad bridge at that point, which was destroyed by the rebels, will be reconstructed this week. The rail way track beyond will be rapidly repaired. Rebel scouts are constantly prowling about our camps, and occasionally a straggler is picked up by our cavalry. FORTRESS MONROE, April 13 .- The Merrimac remained in the same position al day yesterday till evening, when, together with the rest of the rebel fleet, she returned to Norfolk. She is generally supposed to have been aground. None of the rebel fleet have shown themselves to-day. Several Captains of vessels in port testify in relation to the three vessels captured by the rebel steamer Jamestown, that they were ordered to move either outside of Fortress Monroe or inside of Hampton bar. As the position of the vessels in question was iaside the bar, the blame, if any, on account of their capture, should rest upon the harbor master rather than on the captured DEVELOPEMENT OF UNION SENTIMENT .- At the first attempts of our troops-entering the rebel territory a great error was commit-ted, of failing to have a sufficient force, permanently to secure the ground they might occupy. The Union feeling was brought out by the arrival of our forces, and many openly proclaimed in favor of the Union, and identified themselves with its cause the withdrawal afterwards of our men, and the re-occupation of such places by the rebels, rendered the Union men the jects of persecution, and they suffered in-tensely at the hands of the rebels. The recollection of these facts, no doubt, militates against that cordial reception of our armies, which they otherwise would receive in the disloyal States. It is to be earnestly hoped that this grave error will not be again committed, but that whenever a move made, a town or city taken, it may be permanently garrisoned and the loyal people protected in it, from the outrages of the rebels .- Baltimore Clipper.

Mr. Townsend says that the boat can be built ready for service in fifty days, and will withstand shot from the heaviest guns. a load of wounded, was a rebel Major (we did not learn his name), who had been wounded. He states that before the fight, Beauregard made a speech to his men to the following effect: The engagement now before them was to be the decisive battle of this contest; if they lost it, all was lost; if they gained it, the prospect was bright. They had not had any pay, and if they failed in this battle, would not get any, for their money would not be worth a cent; if they gained a victory, each man should have a thousand dollars.

This promise it was, says the Major, which nerved the rebel forces with such desperation and determination. But it was all of no avail, and they have fied not to be coaxed into another fight.

PLANTERS BURNING COTTON .- A secession planter of Tennessee, who was in Nashville the other day to sell his cotton, was reproached by an ardent rebel for so doing. List of Wounded in General Hospitals, From the First and Second Kentucky. Major Cahill, of the First Kentucky, ar rived Sunday night, at the Louisville Hotel, from Pittsburg Landing. He is wounded, and has gone to Cincinnati, his home. We learn from him that before the battle the First numbered only about five hundred and thirty efficient men-that two companies were off on detachment duty, and that consequently the whole force of the First, on the field, did not exceed four hundred men Out of this number, some sixty or seventy were killed and wounded, but none of the officers were injured except the Major.

In the Second, Captains Spellmeyer. Smith, and Bodine were all wounded, more or less, but none mortally. Major Cahill had been struck on the leg with a nearly spent grapeshot and his horse shot under him. He was standing, during a lull in the engagement, conversing with Lt. Col. Leiper (who was in command of the regiment, owing to the sickness of Colonel Enyart), and Adjutant Wright, when a musket ball struck him in the side and knocked him down; but fortunately the ball hit his watch, which, being a very heavy doublecase, stopped it. Immediately the engagement began again, and before he recovered sufficient breath to rise, another ball struck him in the left foot, cutting off one or two of his toes. These were the only casualties to the officers of the First. Col. Sedgewick, of the Second, had his hat knocked off with a bullet, and Lt. Col. Lieper, of the First, received a bullet through his coat and had his sword hilt broken by a ball.

The First and Second Kentucky and Sixth Ohio, having the extreme left wing, were opposed by Beauregard's own forces, and the battle raged furiously, with an occasional lull, for six or eight hours, during which the nine batteries and all the camp equipage captured from General Prentiss' forces on Sunday were retaken, and seven of the rebel batteries. Major Cahill compares the fight to a duel between a tiger and a lyon. The rebel forces, with the violence and activity of the tiger, would spring upon the left wing, trying to break through-then on the right-then on the center-then on some other point; but in every direction were met by a steady and terrible fire from unbroken, unwavering columns, which, foot by foot, advanced, driving the rebels back until the rout became general and they fled.

A little episode, a day or two after the battle, deserves mention. It will be remembered by many of our readers that a few days ago (April 4th), the wife of Lieutenant Colonel Leiper died in this city, and, though letters and dispatches had been forwarded to him, no word was returned. On the second day after the battle, while Major Cahill was on board the boat, waiting for it to start, Colonel Leiper rushed on board with a paper in his hand containing the tion of the army, Mr. L. B. Green has announcement of his wife's death. This was the first intimation he had received of the distressing event, and the brave man, who, but two days before, had faced death in every form, during a terrible engagement of six or eight hours, and had led his gallant forces from victory to victory, was utterly urmanned, and wept like a child.

PERSONAL -Mr. S. C. Mercer, the talented editor of the Nashville Uaion, was in the city yesterday. His new enterprise is thus far a wonderful success.

AMUSEMENTS.

XXXVIIth Congress-First Session. Democratic papers the same privileges in the mails as Republican papers. Mr. Sunmer presented a petition 700 feet long, signed by 15,000 women, praying for inquiry, if further legislation is necessary to enforce the articles of warfor preventing he reclamation of slaves from within the lines of the enemy.

The confiscation bill was then taken up.

Prior to its consideration, Mr. Hale resigned as Chairman of the Naval Committee, and in order that no misapprehension might occur, he stated that he was influenced by no cause outside of the Senate.

Mr. Harris furnished his speech on the confiscation bill, after which the Senate went into executive session, and subsequents ly adjourned.

House-Mr. Kelley asked leave to present a petition 700 feet long, signed, he said, by 15,000 ladies of one slave and eleven free States, asking for the extinction of slavery. Objection was made to its open presentation, and it was referred under the rules. Mr. Cox, of Ohio, presented the resolu-tions of the State of Ohio in favor of such an amendment to the tax bill as may permit the States to collect the same within their respective limits and determine the compen sation of the officers employed. Mr. Cox said that these resolutions came too late, perhaps, for their proper influence with this House. The bill is before the Virginia. The sloop in ballast was coming Senate, but it is hoped that that body will back to get a new cargo. The rebel captain, Regular Sale of Dry Goods, so modify it as to make it more just and previous to being captured, burned his equal upon the different localities and inter commission, remnants of which being found ests, and so change the machinery of its collection that it may be, if possible, remit-ted to the States, who shall have the privil-battle of Manassas. ege of collecting the same, and of determin ing the officers and their compensations Such is the unanimous wish of the people and Legislature of Ohio. The Legislature, in passing these resolutions, was actuated by the purest patriotism, with no other desire than to have this war tax levied and col lected fairly and economically. If the bill is thus modified, the vote of Ohio here for it will be much nearer a unit. Mr. White, of Indiana, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, madela report asking to be discharged from further sonsideration of a petition for citizens of Northern New York and Michigan, praying for the adoption of measures to secure the speedy abrogation of the reciprocity treaty with Great Britain. Mr. Price introduced a resolution, calling on the Secretary of War, if not inconsist ent with the public interests, to com-municate any official information he may have relative to the reported entry by United States troops for Kansas, into Missouri during the last four months, and the forcible carrying away of slaves, mules, horses, &c., to the amount of hun-dreds of thousands of dollars, as well as the destruction of dwellings and farm houses of peaceful citizens. Whether such prop cated, under what process, &c.

Mr. F. A. Conkling moved to lay it on the table. Disagreed to-23 against 92. The resolution was referred to the Committe on Military Affairs. The bankrupt bill was then taken up and ostponed till December. Mr. Grimes at some length reviewed the nstances lately occurring in Gen. Hooker's division, showing that efforts had been made by slave owners to reclaim their slaves within the lines, with the knowledge of the commanding officer; that slaves were taken at Fort Donelson and carried to Columbus. and were forced to render menial service under military law to rebel masters, thus establishing a system of slavery in a free State. He cited similar instances in Iowa and Illinois, and he thought it high time

Congress should adopt some legislation in regard to the matter.

There were as many different systems as there were Military Departments. Some slaves were flogged and returned; others were shot; others were called contraband, and others were prohibited from entering the lines, as in the celebrated order, No. 3, of Gen. Halleck, which ought to be at once contermanded and forever annulled, in obedience to the popular feeling. He thought that great amounts of information could be obtained from these people. The forts of the South Atlantic were yet to be captured, and must be held for years to come. How should they be garrisoned when recaptured. He would answer that he was in favor of garrisoning them wholly or in part by soldiers of African descent, to be commanded by white officers. Our troops would wither under the climate of the Gulf humanity, saving, as it would, many valuable lives. He had no doubt of its efvaluable lives. He had no doubt of its efficiency, for contrabands had worked the guns on the Minnesota at Hatteras.
